FOREWORD

It's over...another City Conference boys' basketball season. This edition of my statistical report marks the tenth year an annual report has been published. It is the culmination of over 100 hours of viewing games, compilation, typing, mimeographing, and binding. Over the past ten years, over 1,500 hours have been dedicated to compiling boys' basketball statistics. I hope that you truly appreciate the time, effort, and pride that I have placed in this and all of my annual reports.

This report is, by no means, the effort of just one individual. My thanks go to every coach, assistant coach, and scorer that assisted in submitting the game summary sheets. Thanks also to "Lefty" Gilleland (and Barb) for their total cooperation. Without the help of all that I have mentioned, this report could never have been produced.

As I have stressed in previous reports, my sole objective in compiling statistics in the St. Paul City Conference has always been to give every player and coach in the conference some sort of recognition (which all players and coaches deserve) and to give special recognition to those that excel in a particular category. One must always remember that a player's ability cannot, and should not, be measured solely on his statistics.

Reflecting back upon the past ten years brings to mind the success of several teams. The early seventies found Murray as the dominating force. This was followed by Highland Park, and now with Central. Mechanic Arts and Humboldt were also able to claim conference championships (the first outright crown for the Indians in almost sixty years). It seems as though every team enjoyed some degree of success during the seventies--reflecting the balance of the conference.

The seventies also found the closing of four long-time conference schools: Mechanic Arts, Monroe, Murray, and Washington. Even though economics forced the closing of these schools, the memories of their successes will live forever. The addition of Cretin, Hill-Murray, and St. Thomas filled the void left by the closings, giving added strength in not only basketball, but all sports.

As you peruse through the pages of this and previous reports, I hope that it will help you remember the players, teams, and records of St. Paul City Conference basketball, 1971-1980. Happy reading!!

John A. Vosejka

STATISTICIAN'S NOTE

With the merging of Murray and Washington into Como Park, the conference played a different amount of games (18 less) than were played last season.

*For this reason, it is impossible to compare this season's statistics with those of last year. I, therefore, was forced to compute the average statistic from last season and multiply that number to create a total that could be used for comparison. Seasonal increases or decreases that have been affected are denoted with an asterisk (*).*

I feel that this is the only way that a true comparison of the two seasons is possible.
